Pre-Gaming History

Born: Delhi, India, 1890
Parents: Baron Robert Trevelyan (known as “The Colonel” to his children) and Lady Amelia
Lady Amelia died of Malaria in 1895. The Baron remarried in 1899, to Lady Mary Northcote
Siblings: Robert, Jr (1888-1915), and Katherine (1902-)

The Trevelyan family of Sussex has had a family Regiment since the Napoleonic Wars. The regiment has been stationed in India since the Indian Mutiny of the Native Regiments of 1857. Since 1870, the regiment has been stationed in the Punjabi State. Due to the length of time spent in India, there are a number of family holdings spread through the State and in Delhi and Calcutta.

While Robby was fathers favourite, mother favoured me. But when she passed on, I spent a lot of time with my friends ... my Punjabi friends. I was treated like one of their own. For 3 years, the Colonel didn't care. It was only when my brother left for England that I must be with him and my tutors. Robby was sent to Sandringhurst to follow in the family tradition of serving in Her Majesty's army. In due time, the year of the arrival of my new mother, I too was sent to Sandringhurst to follow in my brothers footsteps. She may have tried to be nice to me, but I guess there wasn't time for me to stop resenting her for taking the place of mother.

Time passed slowly in Sandringhurst, especially since the only person I knew didn't want to be seen with me. But I survived and graduated in 1908. When Robby left Sandringhurst, he went straight back to India to the Regiment. But, I was sent to a Fusiliers regiment in Oxford. I guess coming first is more important ... But anyway, I didn't make many friends ... In fact, I guess I only made acquaintances. I suppose that I wasn't outgoing but I felt so out of place in England and it was always so cold. Ah well, whatever.

In 1911, I finally went back to India to serve as a Lieutenant in the Regiment. By that time, my brother had already become a Captain (!?). I finally met my sister, Kitty. The one family member whose company I enjoyed. Just as much as we were family, we were friends too. Although it was a time of drills and military boredom, it was also a time of exploration of the unfamiliar and the strangely familiar. I spent most of my time stationed in Jullundar in the Punjab, where I formed a number of attachments with many of the Brahmin families. I also met some of my old friends, but I couldn't get the same camaraderie that we had before. I took to taking my leave in many varied places, including a trip down to Singapore. A trip which I deeply regret, for I caught the same disease that killed my mother. I got Malaria soon after getting there. Never having anything worse than a cold before, I know I didn't act too bravely but I always felt myself being calmed by mother. Delirium, the doctors said, but I don't know.... I survived that hellish time, but it still likes to visit me occasionally. A year after recovering, I took to going climbing. You see ... I found that I could restore at least my strength and my dexterity, if not my constitution. I also found that I enjoyed pitting myself against nature. That through such clean struggle, I could achieve things done by few before me. Something that was Tyson, and not Trevelyan.

Everybody knows of the War, of course. As soon as word reached India, our regiment was one of the many that was sent to fight in France. Within 2 months of the Empire declaring war on Germany, we were on French fields. Within 12 months, my brother died leading an assault. Within 14 months, my father died of broken heart. I know it was on an assault, but he wouldn't have Umm, yes ... well, I survived. Assault after assault, I survived. I made it to Captain soon after The Colonel's assault. But month after month, I found it harder and harder to convince the men to go over the top. I kind of felt that was why I was promoted to Major by 1918, but I know it was because I had survived long enough while others fell around me. Humph. The War To End All Wars did, in fact, end. And the regiment returned home ... to India, naturally.

For all that I was home, I still didn't feel all there. The old drills seemed so out of place, like we were boys pretending to be soldiers. The family regiment was now mine ... I was second-in-command, but it was now only a matter of time before I would assume command. I was now Baron Trevelyan. I had been since the end of 1915, but now I had the time to experience it ... brood about it. While we had been gone, there had been a rising number of protests against the Empire in India. I didn't think much about that as an idea, but it did involve British forces in India. Troops were used more to police and to suppress any violence. In April 1919, I found my regiment involved in an incident at Amritsar. I won't say much of this except to say that over 1,000 Indians were massacred needlessly and I keep thinking I could have stopped it. I shocked the regiment and resigned my commission, and “Went Native”.

I have become a Hindu. Whether it was an act of atonement or that I felt that this was a better way does not matter. I had spent most of my happiest times immersed in the Punjabi culture, so I found ... contentment with my choice. My stepmother has refused to accept my choice, but it is not her decision to make. Kitty, as always, is comfortable with this. But she has always shown an ability to easily switch from dealing with different people, whether the difference was race, religion or caste. Although I had always been with, and had been treated as a Brahmin, I found that I spent large amounts of time with the priests. I have learnt much of Hinduism, and much of the Veda and the mythology. I have learnt more of how to deal with people and to make assessments of people. I have traveled much through the north of India, and can mingle quite happily anywhere there. I have even learnt a form of self-defense that doesn't involve using guns or knives. And I still climb to ... what, get away or to help find more of myself.

Sept 1924 Home, Sweet Home

- Fellow PCs: Monica (Jenny) – mousy brown haired American doctor from Maine.
Nikolai (Mike) – Ukrainian Cossack who has performed in an American circus for years.
Charles (Simon) – English dilettante who has a predilection for art, the occult, doing nothing and dueling with pistols.
Anjilee (GM- Sharon) – Rajkamari (Princess) of Shaphura
- Major NPCs: Captain Shersing Singh – Commander of Shaphura's Punjabi guard – my friend
Raja & Rani – Anjilee's parents and rulers of Shaphura
Mohandar Ban – Raja's ½brother & major-domo – all-round villain
Gunjit Ranwarpram – Mohandar's yes-man
Nandu – Anjilee's younger brother – heir to Shaphura – outwardly confident but cream-puff on the inside
Shusula – Anjilee's younger sister – cruel bitch queen – mad dog killer of kids
Lowjee – Anjilee's dead elder brother – rumored to have died by Mohandar
Chani – Anjilee's old maid
Col. Sir Stanley Bracket – British Resident

Highlights:

- Monica, Charles, Nikolai and Anjilee arrive in India – on trip to Shaphura, Charles tries a drug and has a “trip” where he sees a Rakshasa (demon – blue-skinned, red-eyed, multi-armed) who is after me (!)
- Cavalcade is halted by a sword-wielding outcast who speaks in tongues and who shrugs of being shot until I come along and blast him with a couple of critical hits but then appears to be hit by lightning from a clear sky and he explodes.
- Arrive at the Shaphura capital & the Jamti Palace to find the Raja & Rani crazy as loons – no-one knows what to do – so we follow up a story of a strange woman who trashed Shersing a while ago – it's called a tiger hunt, but when we are a day away from the Palace, we are led away from Anjilee and all the guards and elephants are killed with blood and bits everywhere (just like the Somme – oh the humanity) – but Anjilee lives! We trek back through tiger country covered in blood but untouched.
- Us guys break into Mohandar's apartments, I get bitten by his snake-spirit guardian – everyone investigates the secret tunnels underneath where ceremonies of sacrifices have been held – we fight statue of demon come to life – I take the statue's crown & find no-one wants it
- Info from my Brahmin friends leads to Anjilee sacrificing some Special Sea Shells to Vishnu's wife, Kali-Mar. Raja is cured but Kali-Mar appears to have come to stay ~~with~~ in Anjilee.
- Breaking into Shusulla's apartments gives us a map to Mohandar's & Shusulla's hideout – after going there and see more Kali than Anjilee – wild dogs get killed – Shusula gets killed – we kill a giant snake & get to a cavern with a ring of fire around a Banyan tree – I walk through & get purified – everyone else waits for Kali to put the fire out – I touch the tree & we're all transported to the demon's realm – I freak out & think I'm Vishnu – visit Demon's palace and Kali kicks Demon butt – we return & kill the giant snake (who turns out to be Mohandar) again
- Back at palace, Brahmins & Raja turn Kali's visitation into circus, & I mortally insult (according to the Hindus) Kali by sitting down on the throne (hey, I'm Kali's husband, remember) but of course Kali doesn't mind. Kali does nothing except strange clouds gather centering over Kali. I track down Shersing, needle him out of his depression & tell him what to do & he sacrifices his faith & his honor & almost his life to get Kali to leave Anjilee. I have to lead him away & fuss over him while everybody else is all over Anjilee.
- Anjilee's previously arranged marriage is cancelled as she now has much greater value – a living avatar of Kali-Mar. Maharaja Ganga Singh of Bikanir, one of the only 21-gun salute states of Rajasthani, arranges to marry Anjilee. Shersing is no longer a Sikh, and Charles is befriending Nandu. We all travel to Bikanir for the wedding, but Anjilee disappears (in plain sight of everybody) on the Wedding Howdah going to the ceremony. Kali gets the blame.
